

A MIDNIGHT VISITOR.

Every Mother Should be Prepared to Battle With Croup—The Best Remedy.

[From the Providence, R. I., Telegram.] What word carries more terror to a mother than croup, that insidious visitor who steals upon her children at night when they are sleeping peacefully and peacefully not with a cough, but with a deadly work quick, and if not met at the outset with stringent methods is almost sure to prove a conqueror. Every mother should keep a remedy where she can reach it at the first ominous bark. It has been truly said that a bottle of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer inures greater safety from such illness than would a doctor in your house. Pain-Killer was the chief remedy of our grandfathers and with all the advances of science nothing has been found to take its place.

For croup it is without equal. An instance of this was yesterday cited to a reporter by Mrs. J. B. G. Hoskins, of No. 100 Main street, Providence, R. I. "Nobody knows the anxiety, the torture of mind I have experienced because of croup. Hours of sleep I have lost while watching at the bedside of my boy, who has suffered almost a thousand deaths from croup in its worst form. I tried every remedy that kind friends could suggest. All failed me, and I was in despair until Pain-Killer conquered the terrible disease. My boy is now seven years old, and whenever I see that croup is returning I give him Pain-Killer. In twenty minutes the trouble is over and I both go to sleep."

"Pain-Killer? Why I wouldn't be without it in my house a moment for a king's ransom. I feel as though it cured my 20-year-old son of bronchitis after other remedies failed, and it saved me the probable loss of a limb from a broken artery, caused by the kick of a vicious horse. Pain-Killer at once reduced the swelling and prevented blood-poisoning."

The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. DR. CARTER'S ADDRESS.

He Address the Church Extension Society.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather a good audience attended the monthly meeting of the Twin City Church Extension Society of the M. E. Church, South, composed of the churches in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Berkley. Mr. W. W. Vear, president of the society, presided, and the opening exercises were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Tudor and prayer by the Rev. Jos. H. Amis.

After the reading of minutes of last meeting of the Laymen's Union at which that organization was merged into the present society, the Rev. Dr. George W. Carter was introduced as the speaker of the evening. He took as his subject "The Opportunities for Business Men to Do God." He spoke for one hour, delivering an able and exhaustive speech on the distinctive relations of the ministry and laity of the church, describing the former as of a purely spiritual and devotional nature. The relation, he said, of the laity was like that of a reserved army corps to the troops in battle doing little or no active service. He said this was the case twenty years ago, but he was glad to say that the lay membership of the church had gotten out of that inactive state, and was now in the front rank, pushing forward to a large degree, the onward march of the church of God. He said the specific work of the ministry, was to provide for the health of the soul, while the work of the laity was to provide for the body. He said that he did not wish to be understood as advocating the idea that the Christian in the six sevenths of his week's life is to leave God out of his secular pursuits. All we have and are belongs to God, our time, our money and our talent are His, and this must be consecrated to His service as much as the devotional part of our nature. He said that the church had no need to fear the drunkard, the gambler and the outcasts from society. Her chief danger is from worldliness. He said that our business relations were as sacred to God as our devotional interests and that the Christian in his secular life must carry God in his heart, his spiritual safeguard; that a Christian's opportunities to do good in his every day life was limited to his spiritual equipment.

When the Christian carries God in his heart he never ceases to do good, for in his secular life he is to show the capacity of the gospel in the accomplishment of its purpose in the sinner; that of bringing him to a healthy condition to secure and appreciate its benefits. He said the Christian who carries God with him in his secular as well as devotional life will be felt as certainly as a heated stove sends forth its heat to be felt by all within the radius of its power.

The Doctor closed his splendid address by describing the written and unwritten life of the Christian. He said the latter sends forth its hallowed influence to shed joy and sunshine on his fellow men.

The next meeting will be held at Monumental Church Portsmouth, when an address will be delivered by Dr. Smith.

POLLY IS DEAD.

A Noted Bird Well Advanced in Years.

Polly, the distinguished and well-known parrot, which lived for so many years in the garden of Mr. Barrot, on Holt street, died last Saturday about noon, aged between 50 and 100 years. Polly was a native of South America and was brought to Norfolk and presented to Mr. Barrot by Dr. Lewis Minor, of the United States Navy, about the time of the Mexican war. He was well advanced in years when he came to this city.

He was a very gifted bird, fond of talk, and an excellent linguist, speaking Spanish, English, several dialects, and his native tongue with fluency. It would be hard to find one of his tribe more versatile in accomplishments. Polly contracted a severe cold, the immediate cause of his death. He had his faults as others of his kind, also his virtues. Possibly there is no hereafter for him, nevertheless the Virginian feels certain that this venerable inhabitant has gone where the good birds go. He leaves many friends, but no relatives here. His was a noted family inhabiting South America from Terra Del Fuego to Venezuela.

THE NORTHERN VISITORS.

Looking for a Place to Locate Cotton Mills.

The delegation of New England manufacturers are expected to day. They will visit a number of the Southern cities with a view to establishing cotton mills. It has come to pass that New England manufacturers of cotton goods can no longer successfully meet the trade of the South in such goods, and these gentlemen realize that to make money the plants must be located near the raw materials. They will stop in Norfolk to ascertain facilities for business. They will find superb transportation, water and rail, cheap rents, reliable labor, raw products at the door, delightful climate, barring an occasional sample of their New England weather. These gentlemen will receive every attention and be furnished all the information desired.

Like a Sieve.

The chief function of the kidneys is to separate from the blood, in its passage through them, of certain impurities and watery particles which make their final exit through the bladder. The retention of these, in consequence of inactivity of the kidneys, is productive of Bright's disease, dropsy, diabetes, albuminuria and other maladies with a fatal tendency. Hostetter's Stomach and Blood purifier, impels the kidneys when inactive to renew their sifting function and strain from the vital current impurities which infect and threaten their own existence as organs of the body.

Cataracts of the urine are also malaises arrested or averted by this benign purifier and restorative of organs at once. Malaria, rheumatism, constipation, biliousness and dyspepsia also yield to the purifier, which is also a cordially beneficial to the weak and nervous.
